You can request books directly by clicking on the item and then, under "Check Availability," clicking on the "Request Item" or "Request Item through Interlibrary Loan" button and following the directions. For articles, you may be able to request them in a similar way. Otherwise, click on "Find It" and then "Request it from Interlibrary Loan," and follow the directions.

Research Posters Show Off Student Work

We proudly highlight student work in the Guerrieri Academic Commons. The art you see around the building is art we've been able to purchase at the senior art shows thanks to an endowment given to us by the Middendorf Foundation some years ago. In the last year, we also began to ask students to donate their research posters, so we could share those on our walls. The posters on the 4th floor right now are primarily from the Salisbury University Student Research Conference last spring, while the posters on the 2nd floor opposite OURCA are from the Summer Student Research Showcase at the beginning of this semester. Take a look, and be impressed!

4th Floor Exhibit Displays Variety of Treasures

OUT OF THE BOX:
The Archives at the Nabb Research Center

ARCHIVES are repositories of unpublished documents that tell the stories of people, places, and events throughout time. They exist in many forms throughout the world and vary greatly in their size and contents – from closets to converted airplane hangars and digital to analog or paper-based to audiovisual.

ARCHIVISTS work with their communities or organizations to collect, preserve, and share historically significant materials to ensure future accessibility. They are professionals trained in a variety of roles that support the different functions of the archive.

Did you know the Nabb Center has 1950s movie posters from India? Several scrapbooks and albums from students in the 1920s at what is now SU? Six "Mental Photograph" books that people in the late 1800s and early 1900s would have their friends fill out? A ledger from a ship that sailed from the Wicomico River to the Caribbean in 1767? The papers of the first African American professor at SU? A

WPA scrapbook showing the activities of the Depression-era jobs program in Salisbury? All these and more are from the Nabb Center's collections and can be seen in the exhibit in the 4th floor Thompson Gallery.

Did You Know? Advice on how to have a healthy Thanksgiving feast has varied wildly over the years. To see some of the advice from 1992 to the present, do a search on "Thanksgiving" and "nutrition" in the Health Source: Consumer Edition database. The most recent article is about a Keto Thanksgiving, while the oldest articles focus on low-fat or low-calorie Thanksgiving dishes. Find this database in our online A-to-Z database list.
