Presentation Practice Room

Need to practice a presentation for a class, whether on your own or with a group? We have the perfect spot for you—our presentation practice room, GAC 116, which is set up as regular SU classrooms are. You also can record yourself making the presentation (the editor is all too aware that this can be a humbling experience!). To reserve the room or for more information, go to the Libraries home page, scroll down until you see “Reserve a Room” on the left side and click on that, then scroll down below the group study rooms to the Presentation Practice Room. Or just go to bit.ly/SULpresentation.

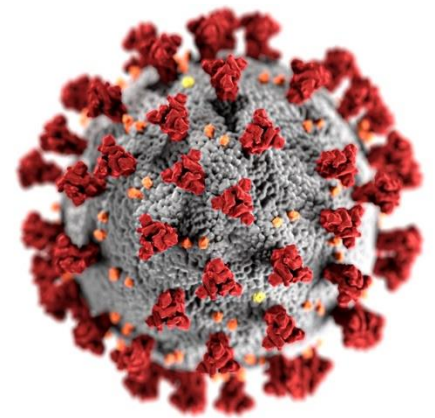

The Library Services Desk—We WANT to Help You

Sure, you know to go here if you want to borrow a laptop, check out a book or something on reserve, or print in color. But we have discovered over the years that students often are reluctant to approach the Library Service Desk with questions or problems. But that’s why the desk—and the people who staff it—are there, at least partly! You are NOT bothering us. Having trouble figuring out which database to use for your research paper? Ask! Struggling to find the right types of articles for your assignment? Ask! Can’t get the darned e-book you’re trying to use to open? Ask! Don’t know how to find a book up on the 3rd floor? Ask! We won’t be able to answer all your questions, probably, but we’ll do our best, that we can promise you.

Share Your COVID Experiences

How has COVID affected your life? Your experience at SU? What was it like to be a student (or faculty/staff) during the pandemic? How did you experience the lockdown? How did you experience transitioning to in-person activities? The University Archives, part of the Libraries’ Nabb Center, is collecting the stories of the SU community during the pandemic—the good, the bad, the joyful, the sad—because we know that this is always going to be an important era in not just world history but in the history of SU and our community. If you’d like to share your story, please go to bit.ly/SUCovid for more information.

Did You Know? Did you know that April is Autism Awareness Month? A search for “autism” and “college students” in the Education Source database yields more than 450 articles. Two recent results are “Navigating Challenges to Facilitate Success for College Students with Autism,” in the Journal of Higher Education and “Adaptive Behavior of College Students with Autism,” from Focus on Autism & Other Developmental Disorders. Check out this and other databases available in our A-to-Z Database list.
