The Guerrieri name is synonymous with generosity at Salisbury University. Throughout the campus, one can see results and recognition of the commitments that this family has made. The Guerrieri University Center, the focal point of the campus’ southernmost entrance, houses recreational, meeting and office space for students, student government and the student affairs staff. This building was named in honor of Alan and Patti Radcliffe (Class of 1956) Guerrieri as a special thank you for a $1 million gift in 1990, which created the Guerrieri Scholars Program. This endowed scholarship benefits more than 30 students every year and will be an important part of the Salisbury University experience for generations to come.

The Guerrieri Research Wing of the Henson Science Hall serves as the research hub of the campus and has played host to the University System of Maryland’s Undergraduate Research Conference. This portion of Salisbury University’s newest building was named for the Guerrieri Family in recognition of a $500,000 gift to fund student research and equipment contributed by the Guerrieri Family Foundation in 2000.

The Guerrieri Family extends a continual presence of caring and commitment to Salisbury University. Michael, son of Alan and Patti, has served on the Salisbury University Foundation Board since 1998. Currently treasurer and chairman of the Investment and Audit Committee, Michael has brought to the Board table not only his family’s love for the institution, but also his own expertise. Cathi Guerrieri Chandler, daughter of Alan and Patti, has also shared her abilities with Salisbury University by serving on the 75th Anniversary Diamond Jubilee Committee.

As a campus community, we are forever grateful for the continued commitment of the Guerrieri Family. We thank them for the sharing of their time, treasure and talent. We thank them for being leaders in philanthropy at Salisbury University.
Hanna Completes Second Term As Board Chairman

To the Salisbury University Foundation, Henry Hanna is known as a true leader and a loyal friend. He is known throughout the region and beyond as a civic-minded individual, a philanthropist extraordinaire and an affluent businessman.

Having graduated from the University of Virginia, Hanna’s allegiance to Salisbury University is not about an affinity to an alma mater, but instead it is a shining example of his impeccable commitment to the region as well as to higher education. Although not an SU alumnus, he has long been an advocate for the University and has unquestionably been instrumental in shaping the Salisbury University Foundation we know today. Most recently, Hanna served a “command performance” during his second stint as chair of the Foundation Board of Directors while simultaneously spearheading the successful Perdue-Kresge Challenge campaign for SU. He and his wife, Dara, are generous contributors of their energies and their resources.

For his commitment and leadership, we at the Salisbury University Foundation want to salute and thank Henry Hanna. His outstanding service and dedication are akin to the success of this outstanding organization that has as its core undertaking to support the mission of Salisbury University.

In 2004, President Janet Dudley-Eshbach and the Salisbury University Foundation, Inc. Board of Directors created the Sea Gull Society of Giving in celebration of the completion of the Foundation’s 30th anniversary year. The Sea Gull Society recognizes those individuals and organizations who have contributed significantly to Salisbury University since the inception of the Foundation. These special friends of the institution were thanked at a ceremony held at the President’s Residence in December. Each individual or organization listed here has contributed $100,000 or more to Salisbury University since 1973. We are eternally grateful for the commitment and generosity of each member of the Sea Gull Society:
