School Information

The Charles R. and Martha N. Fulton School of Liberal Arts houses 12 departments across academic disciplines ranging from the visual and performing arts to the humanities and social sciences. It supports a substantial portion of the general education experience of every Salisbury University student as well as a wide array of majors and minors, including several popular interdisciplinary programs.

Liberal education (the "arts" is often dropped so as not to exclude the sciences) remains essential to our students' formation as individuals, citizens and professionals. In a knowledge-based economy, knowledge of the complex and diverse world and skills in research, analysis and writing are critical. More, in a society in which one raises children with the hope that they can reach their full potential, liberal education is the appropriate way to launch young, and sometime older, adults into rich, fulfilling lives guided by a love of learning, a diversity of interests and a valuable set of skills. More still, the school equips its students to be enlightened participants, and even leaders, in a free and democratic society, thoughtful and articulate about their moral and ethical obligations to their fellow human beings, locally and globally.

Since the Fultons named the school in 1989, all faculty members who have received tenure hold the terminal degree in their field. The model of success among Fulton School faculty is the scholar-teacher, active in research or creative activity and an able and caring mentor to students. The school's emphasis on undergraduate research means that all programs prepare students to conduct research in their academic disciplines. The Fulton School showcases excellence through the annual Salisbury University Student Research Conference and a strong presence at the National Conference on Undergraduate Research, which the University has hosted twice. The school also supports both faculty and student participation in discipline-specific and interdisciplinary academic conferences.

Fulton faculty endeavors include: Literature/Film Quarterly, an international academic journal; the Nabb Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture, specializing in local and regional history; a bi-annual conference on American Women Writers of Color; the Maryland Summer Center for the Arts for talented and gifted middle and high school students; the Institute for Public Affairs and Civic Engagement, which promotes faculty and student research and discussion of public policy questions and sponsors student internships in state and local government; the Center for Conflict Resolution, which supports research on interpersonal and global conflict and provides training and services in mediation and conflict resolution; and a lively University Art Galleries program exhibiting contemporary art in the University Gallery, the Electronic Gallery and our Downtown Campus gallery. In the performing arts, the Bobbi Biron Theatre program, the Salisbury University Dance Company, the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra, the University Chorale, Concert Band, Jazz Ensemble and other music ensembles contribute to a full calendar of excellent cultural events, showcasing the talents of our students and faculty as well as members of the larger community.

Whether students choose a major from among the traditional disciplines in the arts, humanities or sciences, or from among interdisciplinary programs such as environmental studies, international studies or conflict analysis and dispute resolution, all can benefit from our rich opportunities for international study. Short-term options vary from year to year, but regularly include Ecuador, Argentina, Italy, Scotland, India and Vietnam, to name a few. School-sponsored, semester-long programs aimed at providing a richly interdisciplinary experience at a reasonable cost, are available in Ecuador, Scotland, Spain, Estonia, Ghana, India and China.

The school's benefactors made their gift with the intent of enhancing the economic, educational and cultural resources of the Eastern Shore and its future generations. Charles R. Fulton (1919-2005) grew up on a farm in Kenton, OH, and was working in the poultry industry when he met his future wife, Martha Nock, at the 1939 World Poultry Congress in Cleveland. A veteran of World War II, Charles Fulton was involved in Eastern Shore agriculture for more than half a century. In 1965 three of his companies merged with Holly Farms, which Tyson Foods purchased in 1989. He served on the board of directors of Holly Farms and First Maryland Bancorp, the second largest bank in Maryland. In 1998, he received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters from Salisbury University.

Martha Nock Fulton attended what was then the State Teachers College in Salisbury in 1937-38. Her classmates included Hamilton P. Fox, later a prominent Salisbury attorney and leader in Maryland politics, Dr. S. Goldsborough "Goldie" Tyler, who later became a professor at the college, future poultry magnate Franklin P. Perdue and his future wife, Madeline Godfrey. The Nock family, originally from Snow Hill, was noted for its philanthropic role in the religious and civic life of the community and beyond, including aunts, uncles and cousins involved in missionary, medical and political work.

THE SCHOOL'S CURRICULUM REFORM

Though curriculum always evolves over time, in fall 2008 the Fulton School of Liberal Arts implemented a major reform of its curriculum, moving from a model based on three-credit courses to one built upon four-credit courses. The faculty aims to provide students with course experiences that are more rigorous, more focused and richer than was possible under the old model. At an institution that has gained a national reputation for undergraduate research, the Fulton School faculty believe that this model supports the active learning experiences that prepare our students best for life, work and citizenship.

Enhancements selected from seven areas have been either added to or woven into previously three-credit courses that become four-credit courses. A detailed menu of potential course enhancements is found in Appendix D. Fulton courses that feature these enhancements are identified in this catalog by the inclusion of the phrase "Three hours per week with enhancement" in their description. Students who have initiated Fulton majors or minors under previous catalogs and via the previous Fulton curriculum model will be advised and aided by chairs and advisors in a smooth transition from the old version of the program to the new version.

The Department of Art offers programs leading to the Bachelor of Arts and the Bachelor of Fine Arts in art. Students enjoy wide-ranging instruction in fine arts, graphic design and art history, receiving the technical skill, critical perspective and historical background to pursue careers in art and arts-related fields as well as graduate study in art.

The visual arts provide a means for educating the mind to focus on nonverbal comprehension, sensate-based awareness and personal feelings that are imbued with meaning, but not easily articulated. The visual arts are a manifestation of the creative mind, influencing and influenced by prevailing social issues and reflecting the energy of contemporary society. They provide the student with opportunities to apprehend the nature of creativity by mastering a particular medium. The Art Department's role as an SU department is to guide students through a wide range of creative possibilities open to exploration. The department's mission is to assist students in developing clarity and strength in their artwork and to give energy and expression to their insights, unifying talent and discipline with ideas, feelings and perceptions.

The art curriculum is enhanced by various exhibitions and related programs sponsored by the Salisbury University Galleries, and a show featuring works by graduating artists is held each semester. The department has an "open studio" policy, allowing students access to specially equipped facilities even when class is not in session to complete assignments and pursue independent work.

The Department of Communication Arts (CMAT) offers programs leading to the Bachelor of Arts. The curriculum is designed to increase a student’s ability to communicate effectively, responsibly and intellectually. Courses taken in the CMAT Department also increase awareness of the global community, the impact of mass communications and the importance of social media. Further, students sharpen their public relations and journalistic skills for professional application. The department also offers expert instruction in radio and television production, giving our majors access to state-of-the-art facilities.

The Department of Conflict Analysis and Dispute Resolution (CADR) is a unique “program of distinction” that awards a Bachelor of Arts in CADR. The department, in conjunction with the Center for Conflict Resolution, Inc. (see “Centers and Institutes” section for details), offers students a multidisciplinary, practical and applied approach to teaching and training. The CADR program balances core concepts in conflict theory and research, linking these to practical applications in the field of conflict analysis and dispute intervention.

Through the Center for Conflict Resolution, which is the practice, research and training wing of the program, CADR excels in providing students with unique mentored extracurricular activities, programs and projects. The center, through its commitment to student learning, has sent students around the world to study and conduct conflict-analysis and intervention research. The center and CADR adopt a ‘teaching hospital’ model consisting of three wings: teaching, research and practice. Students are fully engaged in all three activities, via supervised mentoring by either CADR faculty and/or center staff. The synergistic impact of the teaching hospital model has led graduates of this program to undertake impressive post graduate careers in the field and to be accepted into leading graduate programs.

CADR majors are equipped for careers in a wide variety of fields including, but not limited to: private-sector mediation; organizational management; human-resource management; law enforcement and work with courts; both domestic and international NGOs; non-profit societies; and governmental agencies.

The CADR Department also offers a master’s degree in CADR.

The Department of English offers programs leading to the Bachelor of Arts in English, enhancing written communication skills, sharpening critical thinking skills, broadening knowledge of the power of language, refining understanding of literature as art and cultivating knowledge in the critical approaches used to analyze literature.

The English concentrations/tracks prepare students for careers and graduate study in such fields as law, copyediting, professional reviewing, technical and grant writing, research, communications, and teaching. The department's teacher certification program prepares students for teaching English in secondary schools. Students who complete this program are certified to teach English in the state of Maryland and those states that have reciprocity agreements with Maryland.

The Department of Environmental Studies offers the Bachelor of Arts in environmental studies. This course of study integrates courses in the humanities, social sciences and natural sciences to give students the tools they need to examine complex environmental issues in depth and assess them from a variety of perspectives. The program combines a solid academic foundation with extensive experiential learning opportunities. Frequent opportunities for research and community engagement provide environmental studies graduates with a substantial foundation for further graduate study or meaningful careers in environmental fields, ranging from land and resource management, to pollution abatement and control, to environmental sustainability in businesses, to environmental advocacy and education, among many other options.

The curriculum requires that students complete an interdisciplinary core of courses as well as environmental electives from departments across campus. Students are required to take an experiential course (an internship, research or study abroad) and to complete a minor in a related field. Courses emphasize experiential learning and field work, as appropriate. Out of the classroom, there's no better-situated university on the East Coast for study of the interactions between natural and social systems. The Chesapeake region and the Eastern Shore are an extension of the classroom, as students can explore some of the mid-Atlantic's most intact river systems; study coastal barrier islands; visit major wildlife refuges; observe working watermen's communities; investigate close to a hundred thousand acres of wetlands; study some of the nation's largest urban areas; and within a three hour radius visit the capitals of two states or Washington D.C.

The Department of History offers a program leading to the Bachelor of Arts in history. The department's objective is to develop a habit of inquiry enhancing students' abilities to think critically and analytically, speak effectively and write coherently.

The history major examines times and cultures other than our own while fostering a sense of the interconnectedness of our world. Furthermore, it offers a perspective of the issues of our lives and times and their significance in a personal, ethical, global and multicultural framework. Finally, the discipline provides a foundation upon which we can build and strengthen those qualities which make us human.

The history curriculum is excellent preparation for careers that cross disciplinary lines and graduate programs such as history, law, library science, museology and international affairs. History graduates may teach as well as work in local, state and federal government, tourism, publications, advertising, insurance, consulting and numerous areas of business.

The History Department further administers the anthropology and gender studies tracks in interdisciplinary studies. See the Interdisciplinary Studies section of this school for details.

The History Department also offers a master's degree in history, with a concentration in Chesapeake and colonial history.

MODERN LANGUAGES AND INTERCULTURAL STUDIES

Major: French, Spanish, French Secondary Education, Spanish Secondary Education
Minor: French, German, Spanish
(See “Undergraduate Minors” section for details.)

Chair

Associate Professor Claire F. Kew, Ph.D.; Johns Hopkins University
Professor

Louise A. Detwiler, Ph.D.; Indiana University

Associate Professors

Brian N. Stiegler, Ph.D.; Pennsylvania State University

Corinne Pubill, Ph.D.; University of California - Davis

Assistant Professor

Sally Perret, Ph.D.; University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Aurélie Vande Wiele, Ph.D.; Rice University

Lecturers

Carolina Bown, Ph.D.; University of Maryland Eastern Shore

Arnaud Perret, Ph.D.; University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

The Department of Modern Languages and Intercultural Studies offers the Bachelor of Arts in French and Spanish; minors in French, Spanish and German; and K-12 teacher certification in French and Spanish. Beginning coursework also is offered in American Sign Language, Arabic, Chinese, Japanese and Russian, among other languages. The department’s mission is to foster students’ abilities to think critically and to communicate intelligently and creatively in their native as well as in a foreign language. It promotes the study of language and culture to provide a sense of perspective and a better understanding of the world at large today.

Many foreign language majors prepare for a career in education, but the ability to speak in a second language is beneficial in any career emphasizing the global nature of our world, such as international business, media, journalism, government, conflict resolution, environmental work, social work, tourism and others. The major also prepares students for graduate work in literature and area and international studies.

Students are encouraged to take advantage of the department’s impressive array of study abroad programs, as well as its local and international internship opportunities, which provide both linguistic and cultural immersion.

The music program leads to the Bachelor of Arts in music that enables students to grow as musicians while availing themselves of the opportunities offered by a broad-based liberal arts curriculum. The program accommodates students seeking an understanding of music within a humanistic context, as well as students seeking to become professional musicians and music teachers.

Within the Bachelor of Arts in music degree program, students may pursue a variety of tracks in performance, liberal arts or teacher certification. Students who complete the teacher certification program are certified to teach music in the state of Maryland and those states that have reciprocity agreements with Maryland. While all tracks are constructed to enable students to pursue graduate study in music, the immediate goals of each track differ according to the varied needs of the student population they serve.

The music program is accredited by the National Association of Schools of Music.

The theatre and dance programs offers a broad-based liberal arts curriculum leading to the Bachelor of Arts in theatre with tracks in performance and design/production, as well as minors in theatre and dance. Dedicated to balancing rigorous academics with high-quality production and repertory performance, it places a high priority on the study of theatre and dance as a means of communication, cultural expression and creativity.

The theatre major is anchored in the liberal arts tradition and strongly rooted in the classical theatre. The major addresses pre-professional training through aesthetic education and criticism, creative expressions, and historical and sociocultural contexts. Design and performance experiences develop a professional work ethic and require participation in all aspects of production. The dance minor provides technical training, methods for teaching and a global perspective for appreciating dance.

The balance of theoretical/applied coursework and performance/production experience develops skills and knowledge that prepare students to enter professional and related fields, pursue graduate study and participate as educated, discerning consumers and supporters of theatre and dance.

The department's performance season runs parallel with the academic year.

PHILOSOPHY

Major: Philosophy

Minor: Philosophy, Religious Studies, South Asian Studies

(See "Undergraduate Minors" section for details.)

Chair

Professor Joerg Tuske, Ph.D.; Cambridge University

Professor

Grace A. Clement, Ph.D.; Northwestern University

Associate Professor

Timothy Stock, Ph.D.; University of Toronto

Assistant Professor

Cristina Cammarano, Ph.D., Columbia University

Yujia Song, Ph.D.; University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

The Department of Philosophy offers a program leading to the Bachelor of Arts in philosophy that develops students' abilities to think critically, examine fundamental questions about the nature of the self and the world, and thus to establish a foundation for intelligent action in the world. Students are exposed to a variety of philosophical perspectives and asked to philosophize. Because philosophy teaches clear, coherent and creative thinking, it can be of service in almost any field, particularly law, medicine, government, education, computers, publishing and business. The department also prepares students for graduate study in law, theology, social work and philosophy.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Majors: International Studies, Political Science

Minors: International Studies, Political Science

Leonard C. Robinson, Ph.D.; University of Utah

Sarah Surak, Ph.D.: Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University

Joint appointment with Environmental Studies Department

Assistant Professor

Eric Rittinger, Ph.D.; Syracuse University

The Department of Political Science offers a program leading to the Bachelor of Arts in political science, which furthers the understanding of political processes and structures at the local, state, national and international levels. Central concerns include the relationship between governmental leaders and citizens, the relationships between nations and the effect on politics of economic, social and cultural forces.

The study of political science is a basis for citizens' responsible political participation and critical thinking, particularly in analyzing public policies. Internship and international field study courses provide hands-on experiences in the real political world.

Political science prepares students for law school and graduate programs in political science, international studies, public administration and policy sciences. Careers for political science majors include government service (local, state or federal level), law, law enforcement, journalism, political campaign management, the military, intelligence agencies and lobbying.

The Department of Psychology offers a program leading to a Bachelors of Arts in psychology, providing the knowledge and skills necessary to pursue study in psychology beyond the B.A., or to obtain employment in liberal arts or human services fields. Further, the department serves non-majors fulfilling General Education, minor or other program requirements.

The Department of Psychology encourages a broad-based liberal arts background for all majors. The psychology curriculum focuses on the scientific method and its use in psychological research; examines research literature in areas such as developmental, physiological and social psychology; and helps students communicate psychological information effectively.

The Department of Sociology offers a program leading to a Bachelor of Arts in sociology, which generates interest in how the experiences and behavior of individuals are shaped by social forces. Students gain understanding of the social world they live in and learn to deal with people and organizations in their everyday lives.

Sociology is a valuable preparation for careers in a wide variety of fields including social research, criminology, demography, social psychology, public administration, gerontology, education, rehabilitation, social work and market research. It provides a useful background for law, business, medicine, community planning and politics.

Sociology prepares students for most graduate programs in the liberal arts and social sciences. Through its strong emphasis in the core areas of theory and social research, the curriculum particularly enables students to successfully study sociology beyond the B.A.

► Departmental Honors Program

Sociology majors of outstanding ability may achieve recognition through the departmental honors program. To be considered for departmental honors, students should apply to the department chair, or be recommended to the chair by a member of the faculty, no later than the start of their senior year. The faculty will admit qualified students to SOCI 495: Independent Study for Department Honors considering each student and his/her proposal for the independent study. Students are awarded honors upon their completion of the independent study with a grade of B or better and their completion of the major coursework with a minimum 3.5 average.

General Information

► General Education

ART 121, 129, 130, 201 or 215 may be used to satisfy a General Education Group IIIA or IIIC requirement. Students seeking art studio credits without registration in areas of special proficiency may challenge courses through a written examination and presentation of a portfolio. The challenge procedure is not open to first-semester freshmen. Transfer students wishing to challenge studio courses should contact the department chair to arrange for advising, testing and presentation of a portfolio.

The Art Department reserves the right to retain permanently one work completed by each student in each class. Disposition of these works is the prerogative of the department. Other works may be held temporarily for use in special exhibitions and will be available to owners no later than one year after the lending date.

CONFLICT ANALYSIS AND DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Department of Conflict Analysis and Dispute Resolution

Dr. Ignaciyas Keetha Poncalan Soosaipillai, Chair
410-543-6435

The conflict analysis and dispute resolution major is housed in the Conflict Analysis and Dispute Resolution Department. The curriculum requirements for the conflict analysis and dispute resolution major are designed to provide a sound pre-professional training ground for undergraduate students who intend to pursue professional conflict intervention positions or to continue in a higher education setting. The major is designed to provide specialized pre-professional training with its emphasis on analytical and practical skills. While remaining anchored in a liberal arts tradition and strongly rooted in the social sciences, the program is designed to easily allow students to study in other fields outside the major in order to enrich these skills and these traditions. Faculty work with students individually to develop strong analytical and practical skills. Students are also guided in the development of a work ethic appropriate to professional conflict resolution practitioners.

The major in conflict analysis and dispute resolution requires time in the field working with organizations and institutions that need conflict resolution services. The major has an internship and field research requirement that can be completed in the local community, the region, nation or internationally.

The Bachelor of Arts in conflict analysis and dispute resolution requires a minimum of 120 credit hours. Students in conflict analysis and dispute resolution will successfully complete a total of 10 courses in conflict analysis and dispute resolution (including electives) with no less than five courses for the major at the 300-400 level. All required courses must be completed with grades of C or better.

ESOL (ENGLISH TO SPEAKERS OF OTHER LANGUAGES)/ K-12 CERTIFICATION

Department of English

Dr. Adam Wood, Chair
410-543-6445

The program provides a course of study leading to a Bachelor of Arts with a major in teaching English to speakers of other languages (ESOL) and a State of Maryland K-12 ESOL Certification. The program is designed to prepare educators in instructional and leadership capacities for K-12 school settings.

The program at Salisbury University is housed in the Department of English in the Fulton School of Liberal Arts. However, it is an interdisciplinary major designed for prospective students who wish to enter the teaching profession. Candidates for this degree will do coursework in the theory and practice of ESOL, reading, applied linguistics, the English language and multicultural education. The K-12 ESOL Certification Program is aligned with national standards for the preparation of ESOL professionals, as established by the National TESOL Organization and NCATE. It also reflects principles of Maryland’s Redesign for Teacher Education.

The ESOL program includes a General Education experience, the ESOL core requirements and a professional semester consisting of two internships and an internship seminar.

ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES

Department of Environmental Studies

Dr. Michael Lewis, Chair
410-543-8105

Environmental studies is an interdisciplinary major housed in the Fulton School of Liberal Arts. The major focuses on how the environment is defined and understood from the perspectives of the humanities, social sciences and natural sciences. Students learn to evaluate and respond comprehensively to environmental issues. Students are provided with the skills to analyze and think critically about environmental problems and solutions from a broad range of perspectives. This major emphasizes "lateral rigor" across the disciplines, instead of "vertical rigor" within a single discipline. Please note this is not an environmental science program.

The Bachelor of Arts in environmental studies requires a minimum of 120 credit hours of which 14 courses are requirements for the major. At least 30 of the 120 credits must be 300-400 level courses completed with grades of C or better. Students must also complete a minor in an area other than environmental studies. Courses taken to satisfy requirements for the major and the minor must be completed with a grade of C or better.

French secondary students must pass the Maryland Praxis content tests or the ACTFL Oral Proficiency Interview (OPI) and the Writing Proficiency Test (WTP) in French. See education advisor regarding appropriate tests and passing scores.

General Information

► Placement Exams and Credits

The Department of Modern Languages and Intercultural Studies awards and recognizes credit through examination in French, German and Spanish. Any student officially enrolled at Salisbury University may be granted credits through the Advanced Placement (AP) exam or CLEP exam.

Departmental placement exams in French, German and Spanish are available. All students who have not earned university academic credit in a language, either through the AP, CLEP or a credit-bearing course, are encouraged to take the departmental placement exam in that language to assist in determining proper initial placement level.

Students who have not yet earned university academic credit in a language may purchase credit for courses below the level of the first course in that language completed for credit with a grade of C or better. Credits for courses below the level of the first course completed for credit with a grade of C or better may be purchased at the current rate posted at the cashier's office.

A maximum of two courses granted by exam or purchased through completing an advanced first course in a language may be applied to either a minor or major in that language. A maximum of three courses may be earned by exam or purchased through completion of an advanced first course in a language.

► Challenge Exams

Any student officially enrolled at Salisbury University may purchase credits through a challenge exam. Credits may not be purchased through a challenge exam for a course below the student's established level of proficiency. Conversation courses are not available for challenge exam credit.

INTERDISCIPLINARY STUDIES

Dr. Darrell Newton, Major Coordinator
410-677-5060

The Fulton School of Liberal Arts offers a major in interdisciplinary studies leading to the Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science. The major accommodates students who wish to develop programs of study in two or more disciplines or create a major in an area of study not offered by any traditional major at SU. This program allows students to create an individual and flexible major that is best suited to their interests or career goals. Most importantly, this program gives students the opportunity to integrate information across disciplines to help gain a more complete understanding of the chosen area of study.

Students may select to complete the interdisciplinary studies major through individually designed tracks or through approved tracks.

Individually Designed Tracks

Catherine Jackson, Program Coordinator
410-677-5046

Students wishing to major in interdisciplinary studies using two or three traditional disciplines should contact the interdisciplinary studies major coordinator, who will coordinate the development of the student's proposed program of study. The student will also meet with designated representatives of their chosen areas of study to discuss and develop a selection of courses that best fits the goals of the student. The student must follow these guidelines in order to complete an approved program:

1. Students must complete a minimum of 30 semester hours in 300-/400-level courses from an approved program, including IDIS 335: Fundamentals of Interdisciplinary Studies and IDIS 435: Interdisciplinary Research Seminar, with grades of C or better
2. A minimum of 15 hours of upper-division work with C or better grades must be completed at Salisbury University.
3. Students select two-three subject areas from traditional University disciplines. An example of a program would be combining courses from biology and psychology for a student interested in neuroscience.
4. The program proposal must include a rationale for the cohesion of the areas of study and describe any potential career goals suitable for the program proposal. Program proposals should list any lower-division prerequisites to the courses chosen for the interdisciplinary studies major. Program proposals must be approved by designated representatives from the chosen subject areas before final approval is given by the coordinator of interdisciplinary studies.
5. Upper-division courses (300/400 level) completed prior to receiving program approval may or may not be used for the interdisciplinary studies major, and no more than 18 such hours may be credited toward the major.

6. No more than two of the courses used to meet the interdisciplinary studies major may be used to meet minor or other major requirements.
7. For those seeking a B.A., demonstrate 102-level proficiency in a foreign language. (Details for fulfilling the requirement are found in Appendix E.)
8. Any deviation from programs must be approved in writing by both the representative of the subject area and the major coordinator of interdisciplinary studies.

American Studies Track

Dr. Adam Wood, Program Coordinator
410-677-0153

Students majoring in interdisciplinary studies may choose a program in American studies. This track, drawing on courses and programs from across the Fulton School of Liberal Arts, offers students the opportunity to explore the history and unique nature of the "American experience" and the expression thereof via the lens of multiple disciplines. A solid core – which includes two courses in U.S. history, one in American literature, another in American government and an interdisciplinary research course in which students bring the various perspectives they have studied together via mentored research projects – anchors the track. While additional courses, chosen from a wide range of offerings in arts/humanities, history, literature and social sciences, allow students to customize their exploration of all things American.

Requirements of the American studies track are as follows.

1. Complete the following six core courses with a grade of C or better:

	Credits
ENGL 380 American Literature I: Beginnings to 1860	4 or

Gender and Sexuality Studies Track

Dr. Kara French, Program Coordinator
410-548-3538

Students majoring in interdisciplinary studies may choose a track in gender studies. This track investigates how gender identities have developed over time and how women's and men's roles have been produced and shaped by social institutions, such as politics, religion, family, sexuality, media and arts. It will examine how our present day notions of femininity, masculinity, womanhood and manhood have developed and changed and how gender shapes past and present day social roles, behavior and culture.

Students interested in this track should consult the coordinator of gender studies. Requirements for the track include the following:

1. Students must complete nine courses in at least four disciplines with grades of C or better from the following:

	Credits

MUSIC

Department of Music, Theatre and Dance

Dr. William M. Folger, Co-Chair
410-543-6386

All students who wish to be admitted to the Bachelor of Arts in music program must successfully pass a music audition and take a theory advisory test. While some students may wish to complete these admission requirements prior to enrollment at Salisbury University and immediately be admitted into the music program, other students may choose to begin as pre-music majors while preparing to complete their admission requirements sometime during their first year of applied study at Salisbury University. Admission and audition guidelines and procedures are available from the Music, Theatre and Dance Department. The music program is accredited by the National Association of Schools of Music (NASM).

The Bachelor of Arts in music program is designed for students who wish to combine the study of music with other interests in a vibrant liberal arts environment. The program provides an extraordinarily broad range of study options, so that students enjoy the flexibility to pursue varied interests. In order that career choices are expanded and not limited, the degree program is divided into a menu of diverse study tracks.

Within the Bachelor of Arts in music program, students may pursue tracks in teacher certification, vocal or instrumental performance, music technology or a traditional (“general”) Bachelor of Arts in music curriculum. While all five tracks are constructed to enable students to pursue graduate study, if desired, the immediate goals of the tracks differ according to the varied needs of the student population they serve.

All students (including transfer students) enrolled in the Bachelor of Arts in music programs must complete all music courses with grades of C or better and maintain a grade point average of 2.5 in these courses to remain in good standing with the program. Transfer students must perform all recitals required for the degree program at SU and pass the piano proficiency exam.

Students completing the major in the Teacher Certification Track must complete all music and education courses with grades of C or better and maintain a grade point average of 2.75 to remain in good standing with the program.

General Information

► Placement Exams and Credits

The Department of Modern Languages and Intercultural Studies awards and recognizes credit through examination in French, German and Spanish. Any student officially enrolled at Salisbury University may be granted credits through the Advanced Placement (AP) exam or CLEP exam.

Departmental placement exams in French, German and Spanish are given during Freshman Preview and at the very beginning of each semester only. All students who have not earned university academic credit in a language, either through the AP, CLEP or a credit-bearing course, are encouraged to take the departmental placement exam in that language to assist in determining proper initial placement level.

Students who have not yet earned university academic credit in a language may purchase credit for courses below the level of the first course in that language completed for credit with a grade of C or better. Credits for courses below the level of the first course completed for credit with a grade of C or better may be purchased at the current rate posted at the cashier's office.

A maximum of two courses granted by exam or purchased through completing an advanced first course in a language may be applied to either a minor or major in that language. A maximum of three courses may be earned by exam or purchased through completion of an advanced first course in a language.

► Challenge Exams

Any student officially enrolled at Salisbury University may purchase credits through a challenge exam. Credits may not be purchased through a challenge exam for a course below the student's established level of proficiency. Conversation courses are not available for challenge exam credit.

Graduate Programs

MASTER OF ARTS IN CONFLICT ANALYSIS AND DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Department of Conflict Analysis and Dispute Resolution

Vitus Ozoke, Program Director
410-677-0276

The Master of Arts in conflict analysis and dispute resolution (CADR) addresses the growing need for highly skilled conflict resolution practitioners to work within judicial, governmental, social service and private sector systems. This is a quickly growing field, with governments and corporations increasingly using mediation and other conflict resolution processes in their day-to-day operations. Students with any undergraduate major may pursue the degree.

The program is closely integrated with the Center for Conflict Resolution, which functions as a 'teaching hospital,' offering extensive opportunities for students to get involved in both research and practice. The academic and clinical faculty members work closely with students, ensuring that each student gains valuable hands-on experience in the field, specifically tailored to their individual career goals.

The curriculum combines advanced skill development with a strong theory base, providing a well-rounded education that allows students to apply theory in the real world. The curriculum also includes a strong emphasis on research skills for those students planning to continue their post-graduate study.

Admission

Admission to the Masters of Arts in CADR at SU requires an application for graduate program admission; the application fee; official transcripts from all colleges and universities attended; if applying for in-state tuition, a Residency/Domicile Information Form; and the following additional application documents and requirements specified by the CADR program:

- A. An undergraduate degree (preferably in CADR or a related field) with a minimum cumulative grade point average of 3.0 on a 4.0 scale.
- B. M.A. in CADR application form.
- C. Three letters of recommendation from individuals qualified to judge the applicant's ability to do graduate work in CADR.
- D. Personal statement detailing the applicant's goals and objectives. The essay should outline the applicant's reasons for pursuing a M.A. in CADR.
- E. A writing sample. Applicants should submit a sample work of 5-10 pages that demonstrates their writing abilities.
- F. Fulfillment of the University requirements for international students as outlined in this catalog, if applicable.

All application materials should be received by the CADR graduate program director by March 15 for consideration of acceptance into the fall class. Incomplete or late applications will not be considered for admission in the fall term. The M.A. program is delivered as a full-time, cohort model; although students may occasionally be accepted for the spring term, or less often on a part-time basis. In making admission decisions, the committee is looking at the overall set of materials.

Program Requirements

The M.A. in CADR requires the completion of 36 credit hours. The program consists of eight core courses (24 credits), two electives (six credits), a field practicum (three credits) and a thesis project or professional development project (three credits). Graduate students must maintain a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or higher with no more than two C or C+ grades.

CADR 651	Professional Development Project	3

MASTER OF ARTS IN ENGLISH

Department of English

Dr. Christopher Vilmar, Graduate Program Director
410-677-6511

The English Department provides a variety of Master of Arts in English opportunities for students wishing to further their study. The program is large enough to offer high-quality instruction from faculty who are actively engaged in scholarship and publication, while, at the same time, small enough to promote collegiality among M.A. candidates and faculty and to ensure personalized attention as students proceed through their chosen areas of study. In addition, each academic year the department offers a limited number of teaching assistantships, which include stipend and tuition waiver in exchange for students' teaching three sections of the English Department's freshman composition courses each year.

Students pursuing the M.A. in English include students intending to go on to Ph.D. programs, those expecting to teach at the junior or community college level, and secondary school teachers seeking to enhance their expertise and credentials. While every graduate student's experience ultimately depends on the energy, dedication and imagination which that student devotes to his or her studies, Salisbury University's M.A. in English program furnishes an environment in which the graduate experience can be intellectually challenging, highly productive and exceptionally rewarding.

Admission

Admission to the Master of Arts in English requires an application for graduate program admission at SU; the application fee; official transcript from all colleges and universities attended; and, if applying for in-state tuition, a Residency/Domicile Information Form. Applicants must have completed or anticipate completing prior to admission an undergraduate English major or its equivalent (30 semester hours of English beyond freshman English) or a major in a related area, with a 3.0 GPA in those undergraduate courses. A student who fails to meet this requirement should consult the English Department's graduate director regarding removal of deficiencies.

In addition to the materials required by SU's Office of Admission, the applicant for the M.A. in English must also submit (or have forwarded) directly to the English Department Graduate Program Director, Salisbury University, 1101 Camden Avenue, Salisbury, MD 21801, the following materials:

1. A written statement of purpose for applying to the English M.A. program and specific option.
2. Two letters of recommendation using the department's form (available through the English Department's website).
3. Qualifying exam scores:
 - A. Applicants who wish to be considered for teaching assistantships are required to have acceptable scores on the GRE General Test. (If scores are not available at the time of application, a copy of the GRE Registration Form should be forwarded to the graduate program director.)
 - B. Applicants who are not requesting consideration for teaching assistantships, GRE General Test, MAT or Praxis Core scores are acceptable.

Qualifying examination scores are considered relative to undergraduate (and previous graduate) GPAs, recommendations, statements of purpose and interviews (if required). There are no cutoff or minimum scores. If a student has already received a graduate degree, qualifying examination requirements may be waived at the discretion of the graduate program director.

All application materials should be received by the English Department's graduate program director 30 days prior to the beginning of the semester for which the student is applying. Application materials for applicants who wish to be considered for teaching assistantships must be received by March 15. When admitted to the English graduate program, graduate students may count no more than nine hours taken as non-degree students toward the M.A. in English. With the approval of the graduate director, up to nine hours of graduate credit may be transferred from another institution.

Course Requirements

The M.A. in English requires completion of 33 semester hours (including a minimum 24 hours completed at SU) with grades of C or better. Graduate students must maintain a cumulative average of 3.0 or higher and receive C or C+ grades in a maximum of two courses.

Students may choose one of four ways to meet degree requirements and all course selections must be approved by the graduate director in English. Students who as undergraduates have taken any of the required courses indicated in the options described (e.g., ENGL 431, Survey of Modern English Grammar; ENGL 433, Language and Culture; ENGL 465, Composition Theory) will, in consultation with the graduate program director, select alternative courses to meet the 33-hour requirement.

Literature (Non-thesis)

- a. ENGL 508 and six of the 24 hours must be in seminars in literature; these include ENGL 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505 and 510.
- b. Up to nine semester hours at the 500 level may be taken in one supporting discipline, e.g., education, history, modern languages, philosophy, sociology, communication arts or art, with the approval of the graduate program director.

Literature (Thesis)

- a. ENGL 508 and six of the 24 hours must be in seminars in literature; these include ENGL 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505 and 510.
- b. Up to nine semester hours at the 500 level may be taken in one supporting discipline, e.g., education, history, modern languages, philosophy, sociology, communication arts or art, with the approval of the graduate program director.
- c. Three semester hours of thesis credit (ENGL 531).

To help maintain a measure of commonality and to assure a broad literary scope to the degree program, all candidates for the M.A. in English in plans A and B must take a written comprehensive examination. Students admitted to the program are provided a list of primary texts in preparation for the examination. Students are responsible for all materials on the list regardless of the coursework they may elect. Students may take the examination at the conclusion of any semester in which they currently maintain good standing in the degree program, though they may not delay the examination longer than one full semester following the completion of their coursework. Every examination is evaluated by two members of the English Department faculty, unless a third reading of the examination should be required. In order to earn the M.A. in English, a student must pass the comprehensive examination within two attempts.

► Special Requirements for Literature Option Teaching Assistants

The literature option for teaching assistants differs from the non-thesis and thesis literature options requirements above in the following three ways:

1. ENGL 514, Writing Program Issues; ENGL 537, Survey of Modern English Grammar; ENGL 565 Composition Theory; and ENGL 508, Methods and Theories for Literary Research are required.
2. One of the four areas on the comprehensive examination for teaching assistants addresses material covered in the three required language and writing courses (ENGL 514, 537 and 565).
3. Students may take, in consultation with the graduate program director, up to six hours (rather than the nine hours allowed for non-teaching assistant Literature option students) in a supporting discipline.

POST-BACCALAUREATE CERTIFICATE IN TESOL (TEACHING ENGLISH TO SPEAKERS OF OTHER LANGUAGES)

The Post-Baccalaureate Certificate in TESOL is designed for K-12 school personnel who wish their professional development and enhance their knowledge and expertise in Teaching of English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL) but are seeking neither an M.A. nor state certification in TESOL.

Admission

Applicants for the Post-Baccalaureate Certificate in TESOL must follow the admission procedures for admission to graduate study at Salisbury University. In addition, the following materials must also be submitted or forwarded directly to the English Department Graduate Program Director, Salisbury University, 1101 Camden Avenue, Salisbury, MD 21801:

1. A letter of application for admission which includes a written description of reasons for pursuing the certificate and a statement of career goals within TESOL.
2. Two letters of recommendation.

Course Requirements

The Post-Baccalaureate Certificate in TESOL requires completion of 15 semester hours of graduate credit with a cumulative average of 3.0 or higher, with no grade lower than C, and no more than three credit hours of C or C+ in their program.

a. Complete the following 12 required semester hours:

	Credits
ENGL 530 Principles of Linguistics	3

NOTE: While the courses taken for the Post-Baccalaureate Certificate cover areas required for K-12 certification in the State of Maryland, this certificate by itself does not lead to teacher certification nor does it lead toward an M.A. in English.

MASTER OF ARTS IN HISTORY

Department of History

Dr. Céline Carayon, Graduate Program Director
 410-677-3251

The History Department’s Master of Arts (M.A.) program offers students the opportunity to undertake advanced coursework in many areas of U.S. and world history, and is especially strong in the study of the Chesapeake Bay region. Graduate seminars on specialized topics are taught by a diverse and world-class faculty, whose primary goal is to see that students acquire the dispositions necessary for conducting professional historical research. Small classes afford individualized attention and faculty support. The scope and rigor of the program furnishes an excellent foundation for those interested in continuing their studies at the Ph.D. level. Evening offerings give teachers and other nontraditional students an invaluable opportunity for ongoing education and career development.

With its emphasis on research, reading and writing, the M.A. program in history not only prepares its students to succeed in challenging academic and professional environments, but also promises to foster in them a lifelong love of learning and appreciation for the complexity of the human condition.

Admission

Admission to the M.A. in history at SU requires an application for graduate program admission; the application fee; official transcript from all colleges and universities attended; if applying for in-state tuition, a Residency/Domicile Information Form; and the following additional application documents and requirements specified by the History Department:

- A. Submission of three letters of recommendation from individuals qualified to judge the applicant’s ability to pursue graduate studies in history, an example of the applicant’s scholarly writing, along with the departmental application for admission to the graduate program in history, to the History Department, Salisbury University, 1101 Camden Avenue, Salisbury, MD 21801.
- B. Acceptable results on the Graduate Record Examination (GRE). It is expected that students will submit the GRE scores at the time they apply to enter the graduate program. Students may be admitted without having taken the GRE, but must complete the GREs within the first semester.
- C. Completion of the equivalent of an undergraduate major in history with at least 15 semester hours in history at the junior-senior level or above, including a course in research and writing, with a grade point average of 3.0 or better in all history courses. This preparation is designed to serve as a foundation for graduate study in history and such courses are therefore ineligible for inclusion in the 30 semester hours normally required for the degree.

- D. A student who has completed a bachelor’s degree in a major other than history should contact the history graduate program director for additional information.

All application materials, either those specified for the Admissions Office or those specified for the History Department, should be submitted by no later than May 15 for fall admission or October 15 for spring admission.

Provisional Admission

Students who do not meet the minimum requirements for admission to the M.A. in history may only be admitted on a provisional basis, and must make up the deficiency. Provisionally admitted students may take a maximum of nine semester hours and must maintain a cumulative grade point average of at least 3.0 with no grade less than C.

Program of Study

The M.A. in history requires 30 semester hours of graduate coursework (including 24 hours completed at SU) and satisfactory performance on oral and written examinations. After being formally admitted, but before beginning coursework, the graduate student is expected to meet with the graduate director of the History Department tentatively to select one major concentration area and at least one minor concentration area (a second minor concentration is optional) and to discuss a possible thesis option. Contact the History Department graduate director for concentration areas.

Up to six semester hours of graduate work in history may be transferred from other institutions.

Students must maintain a cumulative grade point average of 3.0; earning two grades of C or one grade below C is grounds for dismissal from the program.

► Seminar Requirement

Select at least five seminars from the selected major and minor concentrations at the 600-level (HIST 601 is required), the aim of which is to develop skills in historical research, analysis and writing.

All M.A. history students must complete:

	Credits
HIST 601 Methods of Historical Research	3

Complete at least four more seminar courses from the following (seminars may each be taken twice under different course subtitles):

HIST 602 Seminar: Colonial and Revolutionary America	3
HIST 603 Seminar in 19th Century America	3
HIST 604 Seminar in European History	3
HIST 605 Seminar: Maryland History	3
HIST 606 Seminar in 20th Century America	3
HIST 607 Seminar in Chesapeake and Middle Atlantic History ..	3
HIST 608 Seminar in American Diplomacy	3
HIST 609 Studies in Early Delmarva	3
HIST 610 Seminar in Latin American History	3
HIST 612 Special Topics Seminar	3
HIST 613 Seminar in Ancient History	3
HIST 614 Seminar in Asian History	3
HIST 615 Seminar in African History	3
HIST 625 Internship	3

► Non-Thesis Option

In addition to the seminar requirement, complete at least five courses from any 500-level HIST course, any 600-level HIST seminar not taken twice already and/or the following course:

	Credits
HIST 629 Individual Research/Historiography	3
(Note: HIST629 may only be taken once)

► Thesis Option

In addition to the seminar requirement, complete at least three courses from any 500-level HIST course, any 600-level HIST seminar not taken twice already and/or the following course:

	Credits
HIST 629 Individual Research/Historiography	3
(Note: HIST629 may only be taken once)

Complete the following two courses in the last two semesters of coursework (thesis courses may only be taken once):

	Credits
HIST 630 Directed Research	3
HIST 631 Thesis (cannot be taken winter/summer session)	3

► Written and Oral Exams

After completion of 18-21 semester hours of graduate work, students meet with the graduate director to finalize the major and minor concentration areas in which they are to be examined. Students complete the written examinations first; these responses become the starting point for discussion in the oral examination. Students who fail the written or oral examinations may retake the examination once, but must do so within one year of the date of the original examination.
