Additional Notes:

⁽¹⁾ Southeast Missouri State and University of Northern Iowa prefer the ACT exam over the SAT when considering admissions applications. ACT ranges were converted to SAT ranges.

⁽²⁾ Pass rates on teacher licensure exams are not comparable since teacher licensure laws vary from state to state. The examination used, the cut rates, and where students are in their academic programs when they take the examination varies. The University of Northern Iowa requires passage of a licensure examination prior to graduation so their pass rates will always be 100%.

⁽³⁾ NCLEX-RN exam pass rates for University of Massachusetts-Dartmouth (MA), UNC-Wilmington (NC), Sonoma State (CA), Southeast Missouri State (MO), Bloomsburg University (PA), and SUNY-Plattsburgh were obtained from the respective state board of nursing Websites. All report on a testing period of one year, but the start and end dates of that annual report period varies. All, however, include part of 2008.

⁽⁴⁾ Beginning with Fall 2009, some institutions have begun to report using the new Federal race/ethnicity categories. The calculation for Percentage of Minority Enrollment includes those who reported two or more races. Institutions using the new categories included Southeast Missouri State, the three SUNY institutions, Northern Iowa University, and UNC-Wilmington.
