Passing-of-the-Mace Ceremony Celebrates SU Presidential Transition

In ancient Greece, sacred flames were ritually shared between altars via a relay of torch runners, passing the flame from person to person. Each accepted the duty of ensuring the fire was not extinguished on their watch. Recently, Salisbury University similarly ensured that the flame of education will continue burning brightly at the Eastern Shore campus and its satellite locations, not with the passing of a torch, but with the passing of a mace.

Endowment Supports Future Honors Students, Recognizes Beloved SU Professor

Robert Moyle '77 is one of countless SU alumni who remember the bond between Dr. Tony Whall and his students, and how he changed their educational experience for the better. The former director of SU's Thomas E. Bellavance Honors Program, Whall is remembered by many for the former for what he taught – on many occasions even when he dropped to his knees with arms outstretched toward a student as he pleaded with them to look at things in a new way.

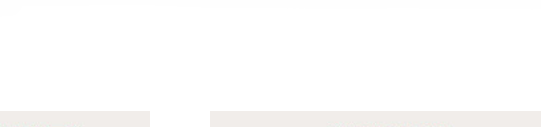

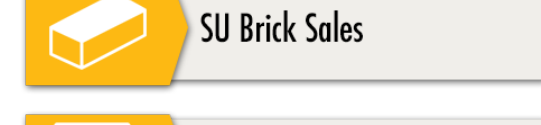

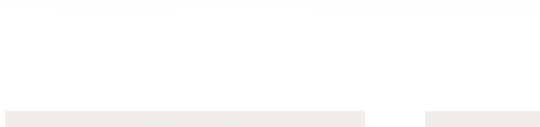

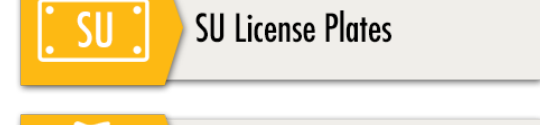

Under his guidance, many students discovered their own passions and went on to find success in graduate programs and rewarding careers they may not have considered before.
