Centennial Alumni Spotlight

Christina Finch '02

How did Salisbury help you find both your purpose and your place?

Salisbury University gave me both wings and roots. Growing up just 30 minutes south in Pocomoke, SU felt close to home, yet it opened up a whole new world. As a freshman, I had no clear major or career path—just an interest in science, math, and art. Exploring General Education courses led me to the Department of Geography and Geosciences, where I discovered GIS and cartography—tools that combined data with visual storytelling. That journey led to a fulfilling career applying geography and GIS to emergency management. Now, I hope to encourage others—especially women—to explore science, technology, and careers that reflect the communities we serve. I'd be honored to support SU in inspiring the next generation of changemakers.
