Just in Time for the Oscars: Movie Press Kits

The SU Libraries have one of, if not the, largest collection of press kits in the United States, with press kits for more than 2,600 movies. What are press kits, you ask? They typically include information sheets, star biographies, photographs, or any other material that the makers of films think will persuade the press to publicize their movies. We owe our fabulous collection to the late Dr. James Welsh, an SU English professor and a founding editor of Literature/Film Quarterly and donated the largest part of our collection to SU. You can find the press kits in the SU Libraries catalog, and you can actually use them in the Nabb Center on the 4th floor of the GAC.

Don't Leave Your Stuff Lying Around

We often notice that students have left notes, books, laptops, phones, or other personal possessions at computers or tables or carrels. Please don't do that! Your stuff is liable to disappear. And it is not considerate of other people who might want to use that computer or table or carrel.

Did You Know Academic Search Complete, one of our primary general scholarly databases, has nearly 600 entries with "Star Trek" in the title? The articles range from film reviews to articles about the science or metaphysics of Star Trek to a research methods exercise for a psychology class using episodes of the TV show. See the A to Z Database list at <http://libraryguides.salisbury.edu/az.php>
